CYCLOPEDIA OF HISTORICAL, THEORETICAL AND CATECHETICAL LITERATURE. Prepared by the Rev. Dr. MCKINTOCK, D. D., and JAMES STRONG, S. T. D. Vol. IX. RH-ST. $v. pp. vi, 1,082. Harper & Brothers.

The publication of the ninth volume of this important work, extending to the title "Styx," brings an arduous and honorable enterprise very near its close. One more volume, already so far advanced that its appearance may be expected in the course of a year, will reach to the end of the alphabet, and it will then only remain to embody the arrears, including results of the most recent study and research, in a supplement, which is to be undertaken immediately. The thoroughness of treatment and comprehensiveness of plan which have given this cyclopaedia such an exceptional reputation are more and more apparent as the publication goes on. Among the larger topics which receive attention in the present instalment of the work are "Roman Catholic Church," "Roman Empire" (ancient and medieval), the city of "Rome," "Russia" as well as the curious and interesting subject of "Russian Sects," "Sadoues," "Samaria," "Samarian," "Samarian Pentitentes," etc., "Septuaginta," "Sinal," etc. An admirable large map of Sinal, drawn under the immediate direction of the editor and embracing the results of his personal observations as well as all the latest topographical surveys, accompanies the volume in a pocket. It is one of the handsomest and clearest specimens of map printing we have recently seen.

DEEP SEA SOUNDING AND DREDGING. By CHARLES D. SINGER, Lieutenant-Commander U. S. Navy. 400 pp. 200. Washington: Government Printing Office.

This handsome volume, issued under authority of the Superintendent of the Coast Survey, gives an account of the work of the steamer Blake during a four-year's cruise, principally in the Gulf of Mexico. It is rather an exposition of the methods employed by Lieutenant-Commander Singer, and a description of the appliances used by him, than a scientific account of the result of his explorations of the deep. The Blake is a small vessel, built expressly for the coast survey service; she measures only 350 tons, and is manned by eight officers (who do all the scientific duty) and 36 hands; yet she has done more rapid work than the famous English Challenger accomplished, although that ship was of 2,000 tons burden and carried twenty-nine naval and civil officers and a correspondingly large crew. This showing, so creditable to our navy, is attributable in part to the zeal, ability and good management of the persons employed in the expedition, but in a large measure also to improvements in the instruments and in the manner of working. These improvements were made by Lieutenant-Commander Singer, and the chief purpose of Superintendent Patterson in directing the preparation of this volume was to set them before the world. The text is illustrated with copious drawings and three heliotype plates. The data collected by the expedition relate to the course and character of the Gulf Stream, especially in the Mexican and Florida Gulfs, and were obtained by continuous soundings day and night in nearly all weathers. The depths, the temperatures from surface to bottom, the character of the bottom, the analysis of the water at various depths, surface currents, under currents, and the phenomena of animal life, were the principal points to which the investigations were directed; and in the last named branch of the inquiry the Coast Survey was fortunate enough to obtain the services of Professor Alexander Agassiz, who spent a considerable time on board the vessel.

A SELECTION OF SPIRITUOUS SONGS WITH MUSIC. For the Sunday-school. Selected and arranged by REV. CHARLES S. ROBINSON, D. D. Small 4to. pp. 120. Scribner.

Dr. Robinson is known as the compiler of popular manuals of song for the church and for family worship, and the preparation of a similar book for the Sunday-school is the natural complement of the series. The poetry is selected judiciously from the standard hymn-writers and other sources, and in the choice of the music Dr. Robinson has been aided by Mr. W. F. Sherwin, who has had long familiarity with Sunday-school work as well as with the music of the church.

Published this day:

LIFE OF JAMES A. GARFIELD. Republican Candidate for President of the United States. By Edward Kirke. Illustrated. 4to, paper, 20 cents.

(No. 132 in the Franklin Square Library.)

A popular Life of General Garfield, prepared by Edmund Kirke, who has had unusual facilities for securing ample and trustworthy information. The life of Garfield is told in great romances of the West. The strength of his early life and the patriotic services of his manhood, as soldier and statesman, are here faithfully portrayed; and the narrative is accompanied by excellent illustrations. The biographical sketch is supplemented by Garfield's most important speeches.
